20 One-Liners to Remember

Quick-fire facts for last-minute revision.

- 1 A Debt Recovery Agent (DRA) acts as an agent of the bank under the Indian Contract Act, 1872.
This agency relationship is the legal foundation for every right and duty a recovery agent holds.
- 2 The rights and duties of a DRA are governed by the Indian Contract Act along with RBI and IBA guidelines.
When the contract is silent, RBI and IBA rules step in to fill gaps in the agency relationship.
- 3 A DRA has four core rights: remuneration, retainer, compensation and indemnity.
These four rights define what a recovery agent can claim from the appointing bank.
- 4 There is no automatic right to remuneration for a DRA; it depends on the agency agreement.
Remuneration must be expressly or impliedly provided for in the agency agreement to be payable.
- 5 If the agency contract is silent on fees, a DRA may be paid as per customary industry practice.
Absent a fee clause, customary practice in the recovery trade determines payment.

IIBF - Revision - Rights and Duties of DRA: Complete IIBF Debt Recovery Agent Guide 2026

6 Section 217 of the Indian Contract Act gives an agent the right of retainer.

Section 217 lets an agent set off dues before handing over collected money to the principal.

7 The right of retainer lets a DRA retain money due to the principal to cover agency expenses and remuneration before remitting the balance.

This right covers agency expenses and earned remuneration, not past unrelated dues.

8 A DRA has the right to be compensated for injury caused by the principal's neglect or want of skill.

This right applies where the principal's own negligence or lack of skill causes loss to the agent.

9 Section 222 of the Indian Contract Act obliges the principal to indemnify the agent for lawful acts done within authority.

Indemnity under Section 222 protects the agent for lawful acts done within the scope of authority.

10 A DRA is not entitled to indemnity for any criminal or wrongful act.

This exception is a common exam trap because indemnity never covers unlawful conduct.

11 A DRA must follow the principal's instructions as long as they are clear, lawful and unambiguous.

An agent cannot be compelled to perform an unlawful or void instruction from the principal.

- 12 Where instructions are silent, a DRA must follow trade customs and RBI/IBA guidelines on recovery.

Trade customs and regulatory guidance fill gaps left by an incomplete agency agreement.

- 13 Under Section 212 of the Indian Contract Act, a DRA must exercise the care and skill of a person in a similar business.

Section 212 sets the standard of skill and diligence expected of a recovery agent.

- 14 A DRA must promptly communicate any difficulty in understanding the principal's instructions rather than acting on personal judgement.

Seeking clarification protects both the agent and the principal from avoidable mistakes.

- 15 A DRA must render proper accounts and keep the principal's money separate from personal funds.

Keeping accounts current and funds segregated protects the principal's money from misuse.

- 16 Section 218 of the Indian Contract Act requires a DRA to remit all sums received on the principal's behalf.

Section 218 ensures collected dues periodically reach the bank rather than being held back.

- 17 A DRA cannot delegate its authority to a sub-agent unless permitted by the principal or trade practice.

Sub-delegation without authority would break the trust the principal placed in the named agent.

18 The duty not to delegate rests on the legal maxim delegatus non potest delegare.

The maxim means an agent's own delegated authority cannot be passed on to someone else.

19 A DRA owes a duty of confidentiality that mirrors the bank's own obligation of customer secrecy.

Because agents handle sensitive borrower data, they inherit the bank's secrecy obligations.

20 The rights and duties of a DRA can be modified through a specific agreement between the bank and the agent.

Contractual freedom lets banks and agents customise these default legal rights and duties.
