20 One-Liners to Remember

Quick-fire facts for last-minute revision.

1 RBI introduced the Business Correspondent (BC) and Business Facilitator (BF) guidelines in 2006.

The 2006 guidelines let banks engage BCs and BFs to widen financial inclusion beyond branch networks.

2 A Business Correspondent can transact on behalf of a bank; a Business Facilitator cannot.

BCs handle actual banking transactions like cash and deposits, while BFs only refer and counsel customers.

3 Business Facilitators can identify, counsel and refer customers but cannot handle cash or complete transactions.

BFs play a purely supporting role and never transact on the bank's behalf.

4 The bank remains the ultimate provider of services and is fully responsible for the conduct of its BC/BF agents.

Customers dealing with a BC or BF are, at all times, customers of the bank, not of the agent.

5 Business Correspondents and Business Facilitators are engaged as agents and are not employees of the bank.

They function on the bank's behalf without holding formal employment status with it.

6 The BC/BF model helps banks reach unbanked areas at lower cost than opening physical branches.

It avoids heavy branch infrastructure investment while extending banking to underserved locations.

7 NBFCs are eligible to act as Business Correspondents only if they have not accepted public deposits.

Deposit-taking NBFCs are excluded from the list of entities eligible to act as BCs.

8 Post Offices are among the entities the RBI permits to act as Business Correspondents.

Their wide rural presence makes them a natural fit for the BC channel.

9 NGOs and MFIs registered under Societies or Trust Acts can act as Business Correspondents.

They are one of the categories of eligible entities listed under RBI's BC framework.

10 Companies registered under Section 25 of the Companies Act can act as Business Correspondents.

This category is included among the entities the RBI has permitted to serve as BCs.

11 A Business Correspondent can disburse small-value credit and collect small-value deposits at locations away from bank branches.

These transaction-handling activities are part of the BC's permitted scope of work.

- 12 A Business Correspondent can sell micro-insurance, mutual fund and pension products on the bank's behalf.

This widens the range of financial products reaching customers through the BC channel.

- 13 Banks must publicise in the local area that a Business Correspondent has been engaged, to prevent misrepresentation.

This transparency step protects customers from being misled about the agent's authority.

- 14 The Reserve Bank of India regulates the BC/BF channel, while the principal bank is responsible for its correspondents' conduct.

Regulatory oversight and operational accountability are split between the RBI and the engaging bank.

- 15 A typical rural bank branch can serve roughly 3,000 to 4,000 families within about a 15 km radius.

This limited reach is one reason the BC/BF model was created to extend banking further.

- 16 The Business Correspondent model concept originated in Brazil in 1990.

Brazil first used the model to help control inflation and deliver social-programme payments where branches were absent.

- 17 India adapted the Brazilian BC model into its own financial inclusion drive, giving rise to the BC/BF channel.

The concept was localised to extend Indian banking into unbanked and rural regions.

- 18 Business Correspondents provide doorstep banking by helping disburse and recover loans at the customer's location.

This convenience is a key advantage of the BC/BF model for rural customers.

- 19 A customer served through a Business Correspondent or Business Facilitator remains a customer of the bank, not of the agent.

The banking relationship and accountability stay with the principal bank throughout.

- 20 The BC/BF framework links financial inclusion, RBI regulation and alternate delivery channels, making it a favourite exam topic.

Examiners frequently test the year of introduction, eligible entities and the BC-versus-BF distinction.
