20 One-Liners to Remember

Quick-fire facts for last-minute revision.

- 1 Most IIBF certification exams are conducted remotely as self-proctored tests taken from home.

IIBF has shifted most certification papers to remote, self-proctored delivery so candidates can appear from home instead of a test centre.

- 2 IIBF remote exams require a Windows desktop or laptop; mobiles and tablets are not permitted.

IIBF's proctoring system only supports Windows desktops and laptops, so mobile or tablet devices cannot be used to appear for the exam.

- 3 Candidates need a working webcam and microphone for IIBF proctored exams.

A webcam and microphone let the exam's proctoring system verify and monitor the candidate throughout the test.

- 4 IIBF remote exams need stable internet with at least 512 kbps upload speed.

A weak upload connection can disconnect the exam session, so IIBF recommends at least 512 kbps upload bandwidth.

5 Once an IIBF exam slot is booked, it cannot be rescheduled or cancelled.

IIBF does not allow changes to a booked exam slot, so candidates must be certain of the date before confirming registration.

6 A missed IIBF exam slot means the candidate must re-register and pay the fee again.

Skipping a booked slot forfeits the attempt, so the candidate has to register again and pay the exam fee once more.

7 A provisional IIBF scorecard appears on screen immediately after submitting the exam.

The exam platform displays a provisional score the instant the candidate submits their answers.

8 The final IIBF result is typically declared within a few weeks of the exam.

IIBF reviews and confirms results before declaring them officially, which commonly takes around 30 days.

9 IIBF's digitally signed certificate is emailed a few weeks after the final result.

After the final result is out, IIBF emails a digitally signed certificate to the candidate's registered email a few weeks later.

10 In self-proctored IIBF exams, the system itself monitors candidates via webcam and mic.

In self-proctored mode there is no live human invigilator; automated checks on video and audio flag any irregularities.

11 In remote-proctored IIBF exams, a live or AI proctor monitors candidates in real time.

Remote-proctored exams add a human or AI proctor who can watch the candidate live and offer chat support during the test.

12 IIBF recommends Windows 8 or 10 and Google Chrome version 75 or above for remote exams.

These are the minimum OS and browser versions IIBF lists so the secure exam browser runs without compatibility issues.

13 IIBF sends a hardware compatibility check link roughly two days before the exam date.

This advance check lets candidates fix hardware or software issues before exam day instead of discovering them too late.

14 Candidates should run the IIBF compatibility check a day before the exam, not on exam morning.

Testing early, rather than on exam morning, gives time to fix problems the compatibility check might reveal.

15 The Secure Exam Browser installs during the IIBF compatibility check.

The secure exam browser (SEB) that locks down the exam environment is installed as part of this compatibility test.

16 Candidates should log in to the IIBF exam portal 30 minutes before the scheduled start time.

The login window is only open for a limited period around the scheduled slot, so late login can mean missing the exam.

17 IIBF exam login ID and password are printed on the candidate's admission letter.

Candidates need these credentials to log in, so they should note them down carefully from the admission letter in advance.

18 Once on the IIBF exam login screen, candidates cannot switch to another browser tab.

The exam interface restricts tab-switching once login is complete, as part of the proctoring security controls.

19 Before installing the SEB, candidates should uninstall antivirus and disable firewall and Bluetooth.

These background apps and security tools can block the secure exam browser from launching properly.

20 Only Windows PCs are supported for IIBF remote exams; Mac and Linux machines are not.

IIBF's remote exam infrastructure is built only for Windows, so macOS and Linux devices are excluded.
